

Course correction – CLEANING UPA permanent mechanism is needed to review laws and weed out the obsolete ones

Law making is a long and tedious process; it appears that unmaking existing laws is an equally arduous task. How else does one explain the fact that until three years ago, a huge number of obsolete Acts remained in the law books despite losing their relevance and utility? It has been only in the last three years that nearly 1,800 obsolete laws have been repealed. In the latest round, 235 out-dated Acts and nine pre-Independence Ordinances have been repealed. These pieces of legislation may have been relevant and necessary at the time they were introduced, but in the absence of a periodic review they continue to burden the statutory corpus. These laws are archaic mainly because the social, economic and legal conditions that required their enactment does not obtain today; they are also not in tune with the progress of democracy since Independence. Among the Acts repealed are the Prevention of Seditious Meeting Act, 1911, the Bengal Suppression of Terrorist Outrages (Supplementary) Act, 1932, and the Preventive Detention Act, 1950. The country still has a body of 'anti-terror' legislation as well as preventive detention laws. Although such laws remain in the statute books, these particular enactments are redundant. Other questionable legal provisions, for example, those on 'sedition' or exciting disaffection against the state, remain; so do 'adultery' and 'sex against the order of nature'. Such obsolete concepts and notions that underlie law making also require an overhaul.

In a 2014 interim report, the first of the four such reports on obsolete laws, the Law commission noted that the panel had been identifying Acts for repeal in many of its reports in the past. Its 96th and 148th Reports recommended a good number of such laws. In 1998, the P.C. Jain Commission recommended the withdrawal of a large body of legislation, and also noted that as many as 253 Acts identified earlier for withdrawal still remained on the statute book. None ordinances issued by the governor General between 1941 and 1946, covering subjects such as war injuries, war gratuities and collective fines, are being removed from the statute book only now. It is odd, even amusing, that the Howrah Offences Act, 1857, the Hackney Carriage Act, 1879, and the Dramatic Performances Act, 1876, have been in force well into the current century. The problem with not removing archaic laws is that they could be invoked suddenly against unsuspecting and otherwise law abiding citizens. It is a welcome sign for good governance that the present government is updating and trimming the statute book. Given that legislation is quite a prolific activity, especially in the State Assemblies, it would be advisable to have a permanent commission to review the existing body of law and identify those that require repeal as often as possible.

Course correction – Best year ever

As Indian cricket wraps up a spectacularly successful year, key stress tests lie ahead.

The Indian men's cricket team had an exceptional 2017- statistically, its best year ever. Across formats, only the all-conquering Australians of 2003, with 38 wins from 47 games, managed more victories than India's 37 in 53 matches this year. Virat Kohli's side didn't merely consolidate its hold on the No. 1 spot in Tests; it also routinely bullied the opposition in the shorter forms of the game. The lone blip came in the Champions

Trophy in England, where India unravelled against a feisty Pakistan. But few will complain when a runner-up finish in a global tournament is the year's biggest failure. That match apart, an inevitability seemed to accompany India's success: whether it was a Test, a One Day International or a Twenty 20, the team took the field noticeably stronger than its adversary, and calmly, ruthlessly, set about proving it. It is often said that a side fashions itself in its captain's image. There were certainly moments during the year when Indian played with the glowering intensity Kohli is famous for. Ajinky Rahane and Rohit Sharma stepped successfully into the breach when Kohli was absent; and both brought to the job the subtle impress of their personality. Besides, the side has leaders all around the pitch. The few times India was threatened in 2017 – and only Australia during the Tests early in the year did it more than once – it invariably found a hero.

The one discordant note in an otherwise harmonious 12 months was the controversy over Anil Kumble's exit as coach. The episode should have been handled better, but it is encouraging that it did not derail the team. Indeed, the overall system looks robust and fertile – rate plants such as the quick bowling all-rounder (Hardik Pandya) and the left arm wrist spinner (Kuldeep Yadav) don't take root and flourish otherwise. Nor do specialist Test Batsmen such as M. Vijay and Cheteshwar Pujara or pure glove men such as Wriddhiman Saha. The thrust towards empowering bowlers, vital in a country smitten by batsmen, has not weakened. Clearly, the selectors and the team management – both in Kumble's time and now under Ravi Shastri – are on the same page; so is Rahul Dravid, who has played a significant developmental role with the junior and 'A' sides. If there is a sobering thought in these heady times, it is that the New Year will bring stiffer challenges. A lot of 2017 was at home, but 10 tests in 2018 will be played in South Africa, England, and Australia, tours that stress test every fissure and fault line. India will not be afforded too many mistakes. Kohli's men have, however, given the team's fans reason to dream.
